BLOC AID RECIPIENTS TO DOMINATE CAIRO ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

Representatives and observers from some 30 under-developed countries are currently in Cairo to attend a 10-day economic conference on the problems of developing nations (See Table attached). The conference, originally promoted by Yugoslavia and the UAR, has since attracted additional sponsors from nine Afro-Asian countries. Delegates from twelve other Afro-Asian states and four Latin American countries, as well as observers from four other Latin American nations, will be present.

The agenda, which as late as April was supposedly to be restricted to technical discussions among economic experts, has since been expanded to cover trade and general economic problems. One of the subjects to receive much attention at the conference will be the impact of the Common Market on the less-developed countries. This is suggested not so much by the final agenda, which appears all-inclusive, as by the national representation at the conference. Of the sixteen African nations who are associating with the Common Market only three - Mali, Somalia, and the Congo Republic - will be represented at Cairo. Of the non-associated states, however, ten are taking part in the conference.

That the conference may have strong anti-Western overtones is suggested by the fact that the eleven sponsoring nations have together received almost $3 billion in Bloc economic aid, in which all but one - Libya - have shared. The majority of the sponsoring nations also have received or are now negotiating for Bloc military assistance. Moreover, nine of the sixteen nations sending delegates to Cairo have received Bloc aid totalling another $1 billion. Of the major recipients of economic assistance from the Bloc only Syria and Iraq are not represented at the Cairo conference. On the other hand, because the representatives are in large part "technical experts" rather than leading political figures, because most of the agenda items are of a technical nature, and because the Egyptian Government has given the US Government assurances on the matter, there is a good chance that the conference will limit the propagandistic element in the presentations.
